Sarah Deysine joined Agrial in 2016 in the Innovation, Research and Development department. She became Chief of the co-operative project and communication Officer in 2018 and joined the Group's Executive Committee. In this context, she has worked in particular on the Co-operative project in conjunction with the general management and the elected members of the Board of Directors. In 2021, Sarah broadened her scope of responsibility to include CSR and, in particular, defined Agrial's ambitions in terms of sustainable development, led the development of our 2035 Climate Plan and enabled Agrial to become the 1st French Co-operative to be certified by SBTi. She is leaving Agrial at the end of this fine career.

She then joined Agrial as marketing and Research and Development manager at Maitre Jacques, before moving on to become marketing and innovation manager in the Meat division, and more recently sales development, marketing and communications manager in the same division. Reporting to Ludovic Spiers, then to Julien Heillaut from July 1st, 2025, Sophie is a member of Agrial's Executive Committee.

Ludovic Spiers, Chief Executive Officer of Agrial, would like to extend his warmest thanks to Sarah Deysine for her significant contribution to the development of the Agrial Group, and wishes Sophie Maroulier every success in her new role.
